LOSING THE CAPACITY

~ Pracheetaa Kothari

Standing behind the palisade of protection that I, as a privileged daughter have been gifted with; my heart suffocates itself with the thought of facing the evils that lay out there in the world; each day!

Shivers run down my spine when I hear of another rose-bud; scaling the tower of success; mown down, smothered raped and burnt for reasons implausible.

My ears have heard and my eyes have read innumerable stories of girls and women of my kind being reduced to mere puppets and victims of the patriarchy that flows through the blood of our country. Another life that has recently been burnt into the ashes of hopelessness is that of Priyanka Reddy - A veterinary doctor of 26.

Priyanka's scooter was punctured at a toll booth near Hyderabad. In the name of help, she was taken 30 km away from the security of the CCTV cameras' of the toll booth and was brutally raped and burnt by 4 men of who, 2 were drivers and the other 2 were cleaners. Laying with pale brows and brave broken hands, her body was found in Shadnagar. To the relief of a lot, the rapists were convicted by the police.

However, the question that has been strangling humanity and must be asked is, "Does the conviction suffice to compensate for the life of each girl that has been crushed into tiny shingles, to compensate for the agony that makes the heart of each parent thunder, to compensate for the dreams that have been buried deep beneath the capacities of each soul?"

Another question that has been vexing me is, "Will you accept me if I were raped?"

I fear; no matter what the answer may be, the moors of society would always be cold and constricted to welcome any girl who has been blemished by the tag of non-consentual coition.

Rape is definitely caused by brutal men who regard women to be mere pawns. But, it doesn't end there. The pain that this social evil causes to each victim is sourced by the rigidity that society refuses to surrender; the refusal of our very own society to accept us as we are once we, as women have been tarnished.

No change can occur unless the equal status of men and women stretches beyond the boundaries of the law unless consent becomes primary in love and life and unless no gender perceives themselves to be superior.

My dear women; we are the epitome of strength, the foundation of the society and the world forsakers. We as women must realise that there is no one who is going to stand by us during the times of misery and thus, we must decorate each moment of lives with independence and individuality. No fear of society must thwart our way towards our dreams. We, my dear women, must learn to face every threat that comes our way and tackle it with utmost carefulness for the world; is not utopian!

IN CONVERSATION WITH MR. BHAVIN SHAH

TOT: You worked as a part of the United Nations, which is a rare profession, so how did you decide to join the education sector?

MBS: My interesting stint in the UN was for seven years in the department Procurement for Natural Devastation. I was the relief supply guy. The last project I got was with a German company and they used to call it teaching and learning aids which we in India call toys. In India, parents buy toys that are big, colourful and attractive whereas Germans market only those things that have a purpose concerning teaching and learning. The German company wanted to invest in India and that's when the Germans taught me the science of procurement. For instance, what proportion of different colours should be shown to an infant because it has a deep impact psychologically on the child? This is what excited me to know more about education because I was revisiting my childhood saying I had never been told to play with activity-based toys. Later, Dilip Thakore, the Founder Editor of Education World, invited me to associate with him on a project and that's how I got completely immersed in the education sector. Now, I am working as a full-time CEO at Education World.

TOT: In the Indian curriculum we follow the rote learning system while the International curricula follow the skill-based learning system. So, which one do you prefer?

JOURNEY THROUGH THE MYSTERIOUS GLOBE

- Google Chief Executive Sundar Pichai will replace Larry Page and Sergey Brin as CEO of parent Alphabet Inc.
- Hotel Mumbai Movie Review: Dev Patel and Anupam Kher film is neither black nor white. It's just right.
- GST council begins review of rates, items to raise revenue
- Former India captain MS Dhoni has told his franchise owners that the 2020 IPL won't be his last and he will play the 2021 edition as well.
- Union cabinet approves SC/ST reservation in Lok Sabha, state assemblies for another 10 years.
- Banks' 'Charlie's Angels' remake flops in theatres.

MBS: I am more for application. Any education right from the Gurukul days to IB; to me just the accessing part creates a difference. Anything that cannot have application is not a correct form of education. So even when you are studying decimals, fractions or TRIGONOMETRY probably when you are studying, you may inquire, "Why am I studying this?"

That's when the educator has to relate to the application. If the teacher is not relating that that's when the question arises. This question does not only arise amongst the students but also the adults because education is everevolving. Curricula are man-made, derived terms. If a student wants to convert a topic into research-based I am sure a Zila

Parishad school will also not restrict him/her.

TOT: Our Prime Minister has been talking about "One Nation, One Education Board", what is your opinion on this?

MBS: I think rather than coming from the top it should come from the bottom. If one likes to learn there shouldn't be any boundaries saying that this is the way one should do it. We are a democracy and anyways India has about 50 boards. I think liberty should be given to the educators to choose rather than it being thrusted upon them.

8 TO 16

~ Tanisha Shah

"Our universe gives life only a brief moment to shine- a haven in time."

I had never dreamt about it, till the last moment I did not believe it was going to be me. I worked hard all these years because that's what I had seen growing up. I always saw healthy competitions and determination. I saw love and compromises. I met the real ones and most importantly I got to choose. I got the freedom to believe. The confidence to believe in writing, Name-Tanisha Shah and Position- Head Girl, on that piece of paper. The confidence to take the oath and be 100% sure to live by it militantly. I turned eight and sixteen on the same land. This journey has not only honed my skills but given me diverse learning experiences, which are too many to mention. The school is now different from before, it is changing, sometimes witnessing this change makes me want to stay on but I have to leave. I am sure I have had some of the best years of my life with the ugliest days here. I had dreamt of giving my speech on graduation day since the day I took the oath.

There were many times where I had to remind myself why I wanted to do this and I do not know if this destiny meant for me to be the head girl and lead the school but I am sure that my destiny was to serve this community which nurtured me and further pushed me to new limits. I have learnt to respect and fight for what is right. They asked me in my interview what will I miss about MIS, I told them gratitude and they had said

"wrong answer" because that is something I would always have with me and not miss, so, Thank you all, especially to my teachers, to my real ones and my 'Elites', to my housemothers, the entire faculty, my fellow students, my aunties and uncles, the administrators and all supporters. To finally sum up, I would like to give a clique for something as clique as the ending of a magnificent journey. "All good things must come to an end", on the bright side, it also said, "One can never leave home".

I have finally learnt that this ending is now my new beginning as it was once for the eight-year-old and now for the sixteen-year-old.

BADHTE KADAM TO IMA

~ Unnati Pattnaik

The 3rd of December, was truly a memorable day for all the MIStars of Grade 11 for we got to witness the passing out parade at the Indian Military Academy, Dehradun. It was fun jogging from the entrance of the Academy to the Chetwood building, the venue for the event. It did feel really nice humbly flexing our school uniforms at such a prestigious events. From the alumni officers gracing the event with their presence to the soon to become graduates to the tune of "Kadam Kadam Badhaye Ja", it was not just motivating but inspiring in true sense. From getting to know the story behind the metal grey and blood red flag of IMA to our deep hidden desires to barge I and explore the Chetwood Museum. It was indeed a fun-learning experience.

Who knew that the companies at the academy were named after some of the infamous battalions where Indians contributed bravely. Most interesting of all was that youth from countries like Singapore, Vietnam, Afghanistan, Tajikistan, Myanmar, Nepal and so on famously known as the 'Friendly Foreign Countries' at the academy came to India to get their training done.

There are no words to express how beautiful and synchronised the parade was! So beautiful that the Defence Minister of India, Shri Ramnath Singh, himself came all the way to witness it.

At the end it was not just the parents of the graduates but also us who felt really proud on seeing the platoon of young cadets march by for we got glimpse of how amazing Indian force has been and will always look like in the years to come.

PREVIOUSLY ON CAMPUS

So, everyone's spirit is high for going home, isn't it?

Our beautiful campus is also becoming more colourful with loads of balloons, lights and sky lanterns. The MIStars of Grade 9 and 11 had a walk to remember while stuffing their stomachs with pizzas and burgers. Lately, momos were surely compensated by lot of negative points. Trying out different assembly formats this year was quite innovative. As we saw the rest of the school packing up for holidays, the upcoming graduates prepared themselves for the long awaited farewell night. While we talk about the last goodbye, girls were requested to set foot on the greenfield and sign on the white school shirts for the hindmost time of the year. It doesn't completely end here, we also had the happy meal on the 6th that included a mouth watering supper and the band performing for us. The heavily decorated Christmas tree surely catches one's eye.

The BATTLE for the most prestigious trophy of the year has now come to an end, the most trending question being, "Who is going to win the Rawal?" While starting the fire in the houses for the last time, the level of nervousness and uncertainty has surely increased amongst the house captains.

See you in the next session right before the coming elections.
